FOREWORD BY MICHAEL J. FOX

Dear Friend,

When we first started the Foundation, we asked a simple question: Why can't we cure Parkinson's disease? Then, we knew what would get us there: our belief in taking risks and willingness to do whatever it takes. But what we didn't know then, and what still overwhelms me today, was how many of you would step up to be a part of this movement.

Everyone represented in this book believes we can find a cure in our lifetime. Through your generous support, you are helping make this vision a reality for millions of patients.

Thank you for joining us on our journey. Together, we will reach our end goal: a world in which Parkinson's disease is no one's disease.

With gratitude,

“BUILDING MOMENTUM IN PURSUIT OF A CURE:” A LETTER FROM THE CEO AND CO-FOUNDER

More than five million Americans are touched by Parkinson's disease, whether they have the disease or love someone who does. In 2012, as always, our whole community played a role in The Michael J. Fox Foundation's efforts to accelerate the cure.

Our momentum just keeps building — in the Parkinson's drug development pipeline and across the PD research enterprise. As a public charity, we had nearly 60,000 individuals, corporations and foundations step forward with financial support, making our progress possible. Thousands more raised funds and awareness through Team Fox or volunteered for clinical research. Together, we're spreading the word and the inspiring belief that a cure can be found in our lifetime.

After igniting the generosity and enthusiasm of Foundation supporters for two years, the Brin Wojcicki Challenge finished strong in 2012. (Read more on page 27.) The entirety of Challenge giving — and more — is already deployed, in keeping with our promise to donors to rapidly and strategically direct every dollar raised to patient-relevant research. In 2012 MJFF awarded $56 million across priority areas targeting patients' most urgent unmet medical needs, pushing past the $300-million mark in research funded since inception.

LANDMARK BIOMARKER INITIATIVE IS A NEW MODEL FOR COLLABORATIVE RESEARCH

Without critical tools like biomarkers, pharmaceutical companies hesitate to pursue research into diseases like Parkinson's. That is why one MJFF investment in particular embodies our groundbreaking approach in action, and our commitment to do whatever it takes to accelerate drug development. Now a $55-million study, the Parkinson's Progression Markers Initiative (PPMI) aims to forge a key missing link in our pursuit of a disease-modifying therapy — and a cure. We recently announced the launch of a new arm of the study involving people at increased risk of developing Parkinson's disease. This followed the successful enrollment of the original 600 participants, who are already contributing vital data and precious biosamples to Parkinson's researchers across the globe.

Five years ago, many were skeptical of whether the time was ripe to begin a large-scale study on Parkinson's biomarkers. Yet today the project has won the enthusiastic support of academic and industry researchers, government and pharmaceutical partners, and patients and families. In addition to the new at-risk arm, the study infrastructure is being leveraged to speed the establishment of an entire network of high-impact Parkinson's studies. A consortium of researchers charged with advancing genetic discoveries toward practical treatment strategies has also been brought under PPMI's umbrella.

An effort of this magnitude required MJFF to chart an entirely new course, taking on an unprecedented leadership role for a private research funder. With your support, the effort is not only providing key insights into how the disease is defined, but has become a new model for collaborative research.

PARKINSON'S COMMUNITY VOLUNTEERS TAKE ACTION INTO THEIR OWN HANDS

Timely recruitment for PPMI demonstrates what is possible when patients and their loved ones choose to participate directly in research. But hundreds of PD studies chronically lack participants, and Fox Trial Finder, which officially launched in April 2012, is helping connect willing volunteers with the trials that badly need them. By year-end, more than 12,000 had completed profiles on Fox Trial Finder; as of this writing, nearly 20,000 volunteers have raised their hand to participate. In 2013, our goal is 30,000, but tens of thousands more are needed. Clinical trial coordinators are starting to report a boost in recruitment activity. (If you haven't already created a profile, we hope you will today at foxtrialfinder.org.)

Team Fox members, too, showed their mettle in 2012, raising $6.3 million in another record-breaking year. Since 2006, Team Fox members and their networks of supporters have contributed more than $20 million to the Foundation's research programs, carrying our message of action and optimism to communities around the world.

We're inspired every day by the energy and dedication of our passionate community members who are taking the bull by the horns and helping speed progress toward a cure.

THE BRAIN IS THE NEXT FRONTIER

The Michael J. Fox Foundation has long been a champion of collaborative efforts to accelerate the fruits of our shared investment in brain research. Now we are cautiously optimistic that the paradigm shift we seek in the Parkinson's field is gaining traction across the neurological landscape. We're heartened by recent public and private efforts emphasizing collaboration over competition in the collective pursuit of cures.

At a time of decreasing federal research funding, MJFF was encouraged by the government's announcement of the BRAIN (Brain Research through Advancing Innovative Neurotechnologies) Initiative with a proposed initial investment of $100 million in 2014. This effort could lead to new understanding of the complex workings of the normal human brain, and to treating its diseases, including Parkinson's. Industry, too, is embracing creative partnerships to pool resources and expertise toward the common goals of identifying more promising targets and speeding these on their path to regulatory approval and market.

We see a growing recognition that the human brain is the next frontier for medical research — and that working together, we can conquer the diseases that attack it. As we face a world where an estimated three of out five Americans will suffer from a central nervous system disease in their lifetime, we can't afford to wait for new approaches.

As you know, our Foundation has always looked at Parkinson's drug development holistically. We strive to tackle the problem from all sides — developing promising drugs scientifically, while simultaneously shoring up the business and regulatory aspects of bringing new medications to market. None of our work is easy and we rarely have a blueprint for what we set out to do.

What we do have, and are deeply grateful for, is your support and belief in our work. Thank you for helping advance our mission to cure Parkinson's disease. With you by our side, we know we will achieve our shared vision.

With gratitude,

THE MJFF LEGACY CIRCLE

The Legacy Circle honors friends who support the Foundation's work through bequests or other planned gifts. While MJFF's mission has always been to put itself out of business by curing PD, planned gifts provide a major, long-term funding sources that we can both plan around and leverage immediately to accelerate high-impact research.

If you have made estate plans that include MJFF and would like to be listed as a member of The Legacy Circle, please call Sarah Barnes at (212) 509-0995, ext. 285.

SURPASSING A $50-MILLION CHALLENGE

The Brin Wojcicki Challenge came about through the generosity and vision of Sergey Brin, co-founder of Google, and his wife, Anne Wojcicki, co-founder of 23andMe, longtime Foundation friends and our largest donors for seven years running. Like everyone represented in this book, they believe in our high-risk, high-reward approach to identify and move the most promising therapies toward patients. To get more people involved to speed a cure, they challenged us to raise $50 million in two years, which they would match dollar for dollar.

In early 2013, we completed the Brin Wojcicki Challenge, raising $53 million, all of which was matched. We were amazed and inspired by the sheer number of people who joined the Challenge, and the creative ways they helped us raise these funds. We saw thousands of new donors making an impact through gifts of all sizes, and thousands more reactivated their relationship with us. Many of our longstanding supporters also stepped up their contributions to take advantage of the match.

The Challenge couldn't have come at a more important time: The pipeline of new treatments for Parkinson's is as promising as it has been in decades, if not ever. Thanks to you, our remarkable community of supporters, the Challenge built our capacity to drive these and other new approaches forward, accelerating our momentum into 2013.

With gratitude,

Sheila Kelly
Vice President of Development

“Anne and Sergey’s friendship to our Foundation and to Parkinson’s patients worldwide is awe-inspiring. As if a $50-million match weren’t tremendous in its own right, they’ve gone above and beyond their initial commitment to match the $3 million extra ponied up by our incredible supporters. There’s no doubt the Challenge has made our community stronger and more vibrant in its passionate pursuit of a cure.”

—Michael J. Fox

2012 FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS

At The Michael J. Fox Foundation, we take our responsibility to our donors seriously. We are proud that since inception, 88 cents of every dollar we have spent has gone straight to grants and initiatives to speed a cure for Parkinson's disease.

WE ARE OBSESSED WITH EFFICIENCY

We are outcomes-focused, incorporating milestones into every award and tying grant payments to achievements of those milestones. We work with awardees to troubleshoot and tackle problems as they arise. But if the science stalls, we halt funding so that limited resources can be reallocated to other efforts.

WE ARE WORKING TO GO OUT OF BUSINESS

We believe that to find a cure for Parkinson's as quickly as possible, our capital needs to push research forward today. That is why we deliberately hold no endowment or excessive reserves, instead seeking to deploy funds raised as quickly and wisely as possible.

As our most dedicated friends and supporters, you make our work possible. Thank you for all that you do. 2012 financial highlights follow. Full audited financials and our most recent IRS Form 990s are available at michaeljfox.org.

"With government funding for basic research threatening to shrink in coming years as lawmakers cut federal spending — or let sequestration do it for them — investigators will look more to the disease foundations, among other institutions, for funds that will enable them to carry out their all-important work."

2012 FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS — CANADA

Since our launch in 2000, The Michael J. Fox Foundation has received a steady outpouring of Canadian support. Canadian researchers have been actively involved in our scientific agenda since the earliest days and individuals from all over the country have stepped up to promote Parkinson's awareness by investing in our research or joining Team Fox. MJFF officially registered as a Canadian charity in 2009.
