FOREWORD BY MICHAEL J. FOX

Dear Friend,

This Foundation began as an answer to a question that drives us every day. Why can't we cure Parkinson's disease? As you'll read in this report, today we believe we're closer than ever to the answer we've always known is out there.

No single individual or organization could do the work of speeding a cure for Parkinson's. In these pages, you will hear from some of the voices of those who are helping us get closer to our goal — Foundation leaders, researchers, Board members, patients and fundraisers who bring unparalleled energy, passion and creativity to our mission.

Since the very beginning, Parkinson's patients have been at the heart of every decision we make. Working hand-in-hand with our community inspires and motivates us. We've started this report with an update on our activities to build on and grow the patient empowerment that's key to getting us where we need to go.

The tremendous generosity you've shown pushes us forward every day. We are so grateful.

With gratitude,

EMPOWERING PATIENTS

OUR FOCUS IS 100-PERCENT ON PARKINSON'S PATIENTS.

Since Michael J. Fox founded this organization, the patient voice has always played a critical role in shaping our decision-making around research priorities. We share patients' sense of urgency for improved treatments and a cure, and our commitment to them remains as strong as ever.

As critical as smart science and funding are for finding breakthrough treatments, so is the active involvement of Parkinson's patients and their loved ones. From our work in the Parkinson's community, we know that people living with this disease are motivated to participate in research and to take a proactive approach to their care. Through our ongoing dialogue with patients and their families, we are building robust platforms and creating accessible resources for educating and engaging the Parkinson's community in ways that foster empowerment at every stage of the disease.

» In 2013, we expanded Fox Trial Finder globally, partnering with leaders in Parkinson's research in Austria, France, Germany, Italy and Spain to launch the tool, compile local trials and translate all content in French, German, Italian and Spanish. Fox Trial Finder now counts more than 30,000 registrants around the world.

- » Partners in Parkinson's, a new strategic health initiative developed in partnership with AbbVie, offers practical solutions for finding the right doctor, seeking specialty care and navigating a Parkinson's diagnosis and progression. Taking control of one's care often leads to greater patient involvement, and that is an invaluable part of our efforts to speed treatments from the lab to pharmacy shelves.
- » Technology is changing every aspect of our lives, including how we pursue cures for disease. The capture and use of data are altering the research landscape in profound ways. Technological solutions exist today for efficiently studying and measuring every aspect of this disease — not just in small populations, as in traditional clinical trials, but in hundreds or thousands of individuals. Projects currently in development at MJFF aim to gather data directly from patients and then make that information available to researchers, altering the drug development landscape and speeding progress toward new biomarkers and drug targets. MJFF is committed to leading efforts that apply emerging data science technologies to the pursuit of a cure for PD.

VOICES OF THE MICHAEL J. FOX FOUNDATION

DEBI BROOKS, CO-FOUNDER & EXECUTIVE VICE CHAIRMAN

"Whether it's spitting in a tube to help scientists translate basic genetic findings into practical treatments, or filling out surveys and contributing data about everyday living that can help researchers understand the true nature of disease, there are so many ways for Parkinson's patients and their loved ones to get involved — and we need them to. Mobilizing the patient community is how we get to a cure faster. Empowerment often leads to greater engagement across the board including, in many cases, a decision to participate in clinical trials that urgently need volunteers. Patients are at the heart of what we do at the Foundation. Our commitment to solving problems and answering their unmet needs shapes every decision we make."

KEY ACHIEVEMENTS

OUR MODEL IS WORKING.

As The Michael J. Fox Foundation continued building momentum on multiple fronts in 2013, we took major steps toward better treatments and a cure for Parkinson's disease in our lifetime. Today, more drugs have advanced to late-stage testing than at any previous time in the history of Parkinson's drug development. But, as you know, we have yet to cross the finish line.

Thanks to the incredible generosity of donors like you, we funded more research in 2013 than in any year prior, with more than $70 million going to the science and projects with the greatest promise to improve patients' lives. We received contributions from 60,000 individuals, corporations and foundations, with thousands more raising dollars and awareness through Team Fox, our grassroots fundraising community, or volunteering to participate in clinical research. The following highlights illustrate our key strides in 2013:

- » Research efforts targeting the two most important genetic links to PD are moving closer to making a difference in patients' lives. In 2013 we saw growing industry interest in the protein alpha-synuclein as a viable drug target. This protein clumps in the cells of all people with Parkinson's, and multiple biotech and pharma firms have signed on to begin or advance development of MJFF-funded projects testing potential therapies for slowing or stopping progression of PD. One study — the first-ever Parkinson's vaccine trial — targeting alpha-synuclein continued in 2013 through an MJFF grant; results will be reported in late 2014. The Foundation also expanded its comprehensive roadmap for LRRK2, the greatest known genetic contributor to Parkinson's, including establishing formal study of LRRK2-positive individuals through the existing Parkinson's Progression Marker Initiative (PPMI) study infrastructure.
- » Our de-risking model, which elevates promising early-stage research to the attention of larger investors, drove major results. Across our portfolio of active investments, drug developers have leveraged $6.6 million in select early grant-making from MJFF to secure commitment of more than $129 million in follow-on funding. Notable examples include Civitas Therapeutics, Inc., which raised $38 million in venture capital to continue development of a levodopa inhaler following our initial $1.3-million investment; and The Parkinson Study Group, which received $23 million from the National Institutes of Health to advance isradipine, a calcium channel blocker and the first potential disease-modifying Parkinson's treatment to advance to Phase III testing, following early MJFF funding of $2.1 million.
- » The Foundation's $60-million landmark biomarker study hit major milestones and expanded its efforts. The Parkinson's Progression Markers Initiative finished enrolling its first set of participants, with and without PD, along with publishing its first findings. Finding a biomarker for PD could mean earlier diagnosis of the disease and lead to new drugs that may delay or even prevent the onset of motor symptoms. PPMI recruitment has since expanded to include individuals with PD risk factors including sleep disturbances, smell loss and certain genetic mutations (as noted above). Initial analysis showed that levels of certain proteins — alpha-synuclein and tau — are lower in people with Parkinson's than in healthy volunteers. This finding from a subset from the original cohort of PPMI participants presents an actionable insight that investigators will pursue in the larger group and over time. Growing the diversity of participants, eight clinical sites also were added in 2013.

Number of Parkinson's drug targets vetted through MJFF projects

- » We continued leading the way in sharing tools, resources and open-access data to speed the pace of research. The Foundation has made the data from the more than 600 PPMI participants available to qualified researchers through an easy online request process. This kind of real-time, open-access collaboration not only hastens the pace of research but also sets the stage for making possible next-generation discoveries that will lead to a cure. Scientists have embraced the study's open-source model, submitting 40 applications for biospecimens and downloading PPMI data more than 200,000 times (and counting) to advance new findings and insights via research projects around the globe. Efforts to provide scientists with the valuable pre-clinical lab tools needed for accelerating scientific discovery and drug development also expanded, as we continue to identify challenges and create infrastructure to address unmet needs. The Research Tools Consortium launched in 2013, uniting industry leaders to discuss and strategize the best use of current lab tools and how to fill unmet needs in the field.
- » More patients explored participating in research and signing up for clinical studies. We know that one of the biggest hurdles to advancing clinical research is recruiting participants. In 2013, we expanded Fox Trial Finder, our Web-based tool matching Parkinson's patients and control volunteers with studies in their community, to five new countries in Western Europe. To date, more than 30,000 people have signed up, but the field still needs thousands more. As part of our ongoing work to educate and engage the PD community, we have joined forces with AbbVie to roll out Partners in Parkinson's, a new strategic health initiative designed to provide Parkinson's patients and families with knowledge and support to navigate diagnosis and disease progression.

TODD SHERER, PhD, CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

"We are continuing to make progress and move tangibly closer to real results for patients. The momentum that we keep building is propelling us forward to the goal we all want to reach — new treatments, and a cure for Parkinson's. But while we've made a lot of progress, in many ways we're just now getting to the hardest part. The good news is, with your help, we're ready to tackle new challenges head-on. We are working urgently to bring together all the key players in Parkinson's research, ensuring that promising ideas draw attention for greater funding and then laying out the next steps for getting those ideas into the clinic."

PROGRESS IN TREATMENTS

WE ARE DRIVING IDEAS FROM THE LAB TO THE CLINIC.

Whether the approach is to prevent disease onset and progression, close in on biomarkers for diagnosis and disease tracking or improve existing symptomatic treatments that could transform patients' quality of life, MJFF is funding work on all sides. Our high-risk, high-reward philosophy gets promising, early-stage projects successfully off the ground so that researchers can attract larger funders and advance development.

MODIFYING THE DISEASE

Finding a treatment for preventing, slowing or stopping the progression of Parkinson's is currently patients' greatest unmet need. With significant resources devoted to this pursuit, MJFF is working to accelerate the pace of drug development, which routinely takes decades, and advance a broad portfolio of next-generation therapeutic options.

- » LRRK2, the greatest known genetic contributor to PD, is the focus of a multi-layered initiative at the Foundation. With research efforts to better understand how the gene works and potential therapeutic approaches ongoing, MJFF is collaborating with a world-class consortium of more than 30 teams to investigate LRRK2's biology, create research tools and strategize around potential roadblocks to a drug for this target. When a drug targeting LRRK2 is ready for clinical trials, the Foundation will have assembled cohorts of people with the mutation, both those with and without PD, to participate in those studies.
- » Treatments focusing on alpha-synuclein, another highly important genetic target of PD, continued taking major strides forward in the clinic last year. The significance of alpha-synuclein stems from its abnormal clumping in the cells of everyone with Parkinson's, making it a promising drug target and a potential biomarker for developing disease-modifying therapies.

PARKINSON'S PROGRESSION MARKERS INITIATIVE (PPMI)

The ability to measure biomarkers of Parkinson's disease would radically transform the development of treatments for PD patients by allowing researchers to confirm diagnosis, stratify volunteers for clinical trials and measure drug efficacy faster. In 2013, the Foundation's landmark study to identify Parkinson's biomarkers expanded to shed greater light on risk factors for PD, including:

- » loss or reduced sense of smell
- » rapid eye movement sleep behavior disorder (RBD)
- » mutation in the SNCA and LRRK2 genes (LRRK2 is the single greatest genetic contributor to PD known to date)

Researchers hope that greater understanding of the biology and clinical features of these participants will lead to therapeutics that would help all Parkinson's patients and ultimately provide strategies to prevent disease onset.

- » Two companies, Amicus Therapeutics and Proteostasis, are working to develop drugs that would keep alpha-synuclein aggregation in check, slowing or preventing progression of PD. In 2013, Biogen Idec, a larger biotech, announced it would partner with Amicus and Proteostasis separately and provide more funding. MJFF supported the early stages of the projects at both companies.
- » Late 2014 will see the results of the first-ever clinical trial against alpha-synuclein, a vaccine approach from biotech AFFiRIS. MJFF granted $1.5 million for the Phase I safety testing of this drug candidate, which activates the immune system to produce antibodies against alpha-synuclein clumps. Enrollment began in February 2012 and continued through 2013.
- » Recruitment of Parkinson's patients for Phase III testing of the FDA-approved drug isradapine begins later this year. In 2007, MJFF began investing in isradapine, a calcium channel blocker used to treat high blood pressure that shows potential for slowing the progression of PD. An MJFF-funded study proved that the drug was safe for testing in humans and enabled researchers to secure a $23 million grant from the National Institutes of Health. The trial will be the most advanced, current study of a disease-modifying therapy for PD.

TREATING SYMPTOMS, ALLEVIATING SIDE EFFECTS

The inconsistency of levodopa can lead to unpredictable swings in motor symptoms, often referred to as "on/off periods," that disrupt daily life for many people with PD. Our efforts to advance development of new treatment methods that deliver more consistent therapeutic benefits took important steps forward in 2013.

- » An "off" rescue method — a thin-film, under-the-tongue strip from Cynapsus Therapeutics — is a reformulation of an available drug, apomorphine, which is only available in injectable form. MJFF funded Phase I testing, and after positive results Cynapsus secured $25 million in follow-on funding from venture capitalists and other investors.
- » A levodopa/carbidopa "pump patch," from Israeli drug-maker Neuroderm, showed positive results from a Phase I study last year and is expected to enter Phase II testing in 2014 with support from MJFF. The pump patch, no larger than a credit card, is worn like a nicotine patch. It pumps medication under the skin and into the bloodstream continuously, averting the delivery fluctuations believed to contribute to motor complications in Parkinson's patients.
- » A symptom not often discussed with Parkinson's disease, constipation, is the target of a study funded by the Foundation called MOVE-PD. Rhythm Pharmaceuticals is testing a drug that may help improve stomach motility and ease chronic constipation.

VOICES OF THE MICHAEL J. FOX FOUNDATION

SKIP IRVING, BOARD OF DIRECTORS

"Over the past decade, the Foundation's strategic deployment of capital to de-risk innovative early- and mid-stage ideas to attract greater investment and more committed participation in PD therapeutic development is proving successful. With greater interest from the government, as well as key players in the biotech and pharmaceutical industries, there are more disease-modifying approaches and symptomatic treatments in clinical testing now than at any time in Parkinson's drug development history. We are witnessing more investors leveraging our early investments with follow-on funding from partners with deeper pockets driving late-stage project development once nurtured by MJFF."

THE ROBERT A. PRITZKER PRIZE

FOR LEADERSHIP IN PARKINSON'S RESEARCH

Honoring scientists who have made it their life's work to speed better treatments for Parkinson's patients is how Karen Pritzker, and her husband, Michael Vlock, decided to pay tribute to her late father.

With the generous support of Karen Pritzker and Michael Vlock, the Foundation began awarding The Robert A. Pritzker Prize for Leadership in Parkinson's Research annually in 2011 to researchers whose work embodies the attributes of the renowned industrialist, entrepreneur and philanthropist.

Known for his creativity, giving spirit, humility and enthusiasm for finding innovative solutions, Robert Pritzker was a true visionary and the award is a fitting tribute to his legacy.

Using the prize to empower scientists is not only about paying tribute to the man for whom it is named but also inspiring hope for a world free from Parkinson's. The award is given to scientists who make an exceptional contribution to Parkinson's research and are committed to mentoring the next generation of PD researchers.

Karen Pritzker and Michael Vlock, along with her father, have long recognized the unwavering dedication required for pursuing a lifelong career in science. Rewarding the contributions of those who are moving the dial in a meaningful way for PD patients speaks to our shared belief in the power of research. MJFF is so fortunate to count the Pritzkers among our longest standing, and most generous, donors. Their support of our mission to cure PD, and this prize, helps make our work possible.

The Legacy Circle honors friends who support the Foundation's work through bequests or other planned gifts. While MJFF's mission has always been to put itself out of business by curing PD, planned gifts provide a major, long-term funding source that we can both plan around and leverage immediately to accelerate high-impact research.

If you have made estate plans that include MJFF and would like to be listed as a member of The Legacy Circle, please call Sarah Barnes at 212.509.0995, ext. 285.

VOICES OF THE MICHAEL J. FOX FOUNDATION

SOHINI CHOWDHURY, SENIOR VICE PRESIDENT, RESEARCH PARTNERSHIPS

"The Foundation's footprint as not only a major funder but a key thought leader in Parkinson's research continued to grow in 2013. As more industry partners look to MJFF, we are conceptualizing and implementing new ways of collaborating with drug makers to drive promising PD therapeutics toward the clinic faster. With PPMI, our landmark biomarker study, industry engagement has been a key component to the success. As the natural 'consumers' of any identified progression marker, their input and financial support gave the study important validation. As we launch our new strategic health initiative Partners in Parkinson's this year, we are grateful to another partner, AbbVie, for supporting us in an effort to educate and engage with patients in a whole new way. Moving forward, the value of these relationships continues to increase as does the complexity and impact of our initiatives."

INDUSTRY PARTNERS

Through research funding, sponsorships, and in-kind contributions to various program priorities, these companies collectively contributed over $8 million to the Foundation's mission to speed a cure in 2013.

REMEMBERING AL GLICKMAN

We lost a cherished friend, leader and champion of the Parkinson's community in 2013 with the passing of Board member Albert B. Glickman. Diagnosed with PD in the early 1990s, he joined our Board in 2004. We are honored that his wife Judy and their family continue to be part of our community. Their son David is carrying on Al's legacy by taking his seat on our Board. We are so grateful to everyone who made a gift in Al's honor in 2013.

VOICES OF THE MICHAEL J. FOX FOUNDATION

CHRIS AND JIM EDLUND, TEAM FOX

"With an extensive history of Parkinson's in the Edlund family, we have chosen to focus our philanthropy on fighting the disease. MJFF exemplifies a best-in-class approach to funding important studies in search of a cure for PD. Our goal has always been to give as much as we can to help fund research. Joining Team Fox in 2010 helped us reach more people in our region and across the country. Every year, our weekend celebration of vintage cars in Danville, California, draws more supporters and volunteers and we look forward to continuing our upward momentum with Team Fox."

THE EDLUNDS' DANVILLE D'ELEGANCE FUNDRAISER WAS THE TOP TEAM FOX FUNDRAISER IN 2013.

TEAM FOX TEAM FUNDRAISERS

In 2013, Team Fox teams, which allows friends, families and companies to raise funds together in their communities, contributed one-third of Team Fox revenue.

2013 FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS

At The Michael J. Fox Foundation, we know donors have choices when deciding which philanthropic causes to support. We take our responsibility to you seriously and are grateful that you have chosen to get involved with our Foundation.

Since opening our doors in 2000, MJFF has held efficiency and accountability as core values of our work. We are constantly monitoring costs to maximize the value of donations. As a result, we are proud to share that since inception, 89 cents of every dollar we have spent has gone directly to programmatic initiatives to speed a cure for Parkinson's disease.

We are focused on results. Every grant payment is tied to achieving specific milestones. We work with awardees to troubleshoot and tackle problems as they arise. But if the science stalls, we halt funding so that limited resources can be reallocated to other efforts.

Our dedication and urgency to driving impact patients can feel are as strong now as they were on the day we opened our doors.

We are working to go out of business. We believe to speed a cure for PD, our capital needs to push research forward today— not pile up in an endowment or excessive reserves.

MJFF has funded over $450 million in research, but we don't measure our success in dollars spent. Our progress is defined by finding scientific solutions patients can feel in their everyday lives.

As our longstanding friends and supporters, you make our work possible. Thank you for all you do. The 2013 financial highlights follow. Full audited financials and our most recent IRS Form 990s are available at www.michaeljfox.org.

2013 FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS CANADA

Since our launch in 2000, The Michael J. Fox Foundation has received a steady outpouring of Canadian support. Canadian researchers have been actively involved in our scientific agenda since the earliest days and individuals from all over the country have stepped up to promote Parkinson's awareness by investing in our research or joining Team Fox. MJFF officially registered as a Canadian charity in 2009.

A blue-tinted photograph of a laboratory. Two scientists in white lab coats are walking through a hallway. The scientist on the left is holding a small vial and looking down at it. The scientist on the right is also looking down. In the background, there are laboratory benches with various equipment, including a microscope and a computer monitor. The text "Clearly, this is not your typical celebrity foundation." is overlaid in white, bold, sans-serif font.

typical celebrity
foundation.”
